Dear Parent/Carer,

We are delighted to inform you that [insert school name] will be hosting a visit from community charity I Am Me Scotland and the NSPCC on [insert date] for a special play and workshop tailored for students in S2.

I Am Me Scotland and the NSPCC Local Campaigns team, in collaboration with the “Ready To Talk” campaign, is facilitating a regional tour of an immersive theatre-in-education production titled “It’s Not Okay”. This engaging play, commissioned by the NSPCC and created by York St John University (YSJ), is designed to address and explore the crucial themes of healthy and unhealthy relationships.

The performance will be followed by an interactive workshop co-facilitated by I Am Me Scotland, NSPCC and staff from the Glasgow theatre company Wonder Fools, alongside trained external partners. During this workshop, students will have the opportunity to delve deeper into the play’s narrative, which follows the lives of four characters and examines the decisions they make and their subsequent consequences. The interactive nature of the workshop allows students to contribute their thoughts on the characters’ choices and reflect on the potential impact of these decisions.

The primary aim of this project is to prevent interpersonal relationship abuse by fostering positive behaviour changes and enhancing students’ understanding of healthy relationships. The tour has already been successful in various schools across the UK, with feedback from both staff and students being overwhelmingly positive.

We believe that this initiative will be a valuable and enriching experience for our students, and we look forward to welcoming the NSPCC and the “It’s Not Okay” team to our school.

We would be delighted to see you at the public performance of the play on Friday 10th October at 1.30pm in Johnstone Town Hall. This will give you the opportunity to see the play, and the amazing resources that young people in Renfrewshire have developed.
